

TAX POLICIES

to advance stable homes for all

When communities have adequate housing that is affordable to families across the income spectrum, children learn, workers earn, seniors thrive and communities prosper. But, right now, more than 580,000 Minnesota households pay more than they can afford on housing, forcing families to forgo necessities like gas to get to work and medicine to maintain their health. That's why Homes for All advocates for tax policies that invest in affordable housing and ensure Minnesotans at all income levels can access a path to prosperity.

Tax Credit Contribution Fund
